

Have you ever wondered whether we are alone in space?

Well, the answer is no.

Clank! Clank! Clank! "Are you sure you know what you're doing?" I asked.

"Yes, of course I do." Replied Mark, "I've just got to do one more thing and... finished!"

"There, now there should be enough power in this to buy us about 72hrs of flight time but then..."

"We're stuck, staring into the terrifying black void of space for the rest of our lives." I said with a hint of fear in my voice.

"Well, I guess we better go tell the others the good news." Mark sighed.

When we finally reached the command deck, we found everybody standing around the holotable looking at a projection of the station's thrusters.

"Oh, there you are" said the commander

"Sir, we managed to fix the main engine however we only have 72hrs of flight time" I said.

"Erm, yes about that as you can see one of the primary thrusters has been damaged however, we don't know how damaged, so we need you to go and see."

"OK" I sighed

"Ok so now that you've put on the suit pick up the camera and attach the orange rope to one of the orange bars." Said John.

"Ok, done" I replied

"Now open the hatch"

"Ok" I replied. I heaved the heavy Iron hatch open and I felt my self-lose all sense of balance and I began floating around. I made my way over to the hatch and tumbled out of it, I pulled myself back to the station and made my way over to the thrusters.

"Ok" said John over the comms. "Now take a picture of the damaged area"

"Done" I said. I heard a faint beeping from over the comms

"Get out of there now!" Yelled John

"Why?!" I asked.

"Because there are meteors inbound" John yelled

I pushed of a panel and grabbed onto one of the solar panels but when I looked up a meteor was headed Straight for me, I moved away from it but the panel was now completely detached and my tether had been snapped, I was falling away from the station and my vision was getting frosty.

Ow! I awoke in a strange forest surrounded by trees that looked like none I had ever seen before and a strange sound filled the air. Nearby I could just make out the shape of the space station surrounded by aliens who were taking apart the station so I decided to go and stop them and try to take back the parts but they caught me and my friends. I managed to turn one of the aliens against the other aliens and he let us out and we fixed the space station and escaped.